Council unanimously rejects club

Committee cites concerns

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

A proposal for a club offering topless and bottomless dancers was unanimously voted down Tuesday by the Madison City Council.

Deja Vu, based in Springfield, had submitted a proposal to lease the current Stages night club, located on Illinois 203 in Madison.

According to its proposal, Deja Vu would spend $1 million to renovate the building before opening a club featuring live adult entertainment.

Despite the council's action, Larry Goldberg, a St. Louis attorney representing Deja Vu, said he is confident the club will open in the near future.

He said a number of options are being considered, including purchasing the site from the city, joining a current St. Clair County lawsuit that alleges the site was improperly annexed into the city, and fighting the constitutionality of the city's obscenity ordinance in court.

Goldberg said he is confident the club will win no matter which option is selected.

He would not rule out the possibility of seeking a court order to allow the club to go ahead and open and operate, pending the outcome of any or all of the legal actions taken.

Because the proposal would have required amendment of the city's 1989 obscenity ordinance, the issue had been turned over to the council's Legislative Committee made up of Aldermen George Amosch, chairman, and Michael Vrabec and Ralph Miller.

The committee held several public meetings concerning the proposal, including a public hearing Monday night attended by more than 300 residents. The committee, at an open meeting Tuesday, voted unanimously to recommend the Deja Vu proposal be rejected.

To handle the crowd of about 400 people Tuesday night, the City Council moved its meeting to Engelbert Hall. At that meeting, the committee presented the following findings regarding

Legality of ban debated

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

Is it really possible that a federal judge may force Madison to allow nude dancing in the city?

It is, according to Larry Goldberg, St. Louis attorney representing the Deja Vu company. Goldberg said Madison's 1989 obscenity ordinance is "patently unconstitutional" under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and said he is "absolutely confident" it will be defeated in court.

It is not, according to Casper Nighobossian, Madison city attorney and author of the obscenity ordinance. He said he has no problem defending the ordinance in court and is "very confident" the ordinance will be upheld if challenged.

The real answer, according to Jules Gerard, an expert in free-speech law and a professor at the Washington University in St. Louis School of Law, is "probably no one knows because the

1 vote for Eticam Neighbor supports plan

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

At least one Lincoln Place resident is in favor of a proposed hazardous waste treatment plant in Granite City.

Mary Ellen Marcus, of the 1200 block of Maple Street, told the City Council on Tuesday she is tired of the controversy surrounding Eticam.

Eticam has applied to the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency for a permit to operate a hazardous-waste treatment plant on Illinois about 3,000 feet from Prather Elementary School.

The Granite City School Board and the Prather parent-teacher organization have publicly expressed concern about the proposed facility and the potential danger to children in the event of an accident.

But Marcus said Prather parents should be more concerned about that school's heating system than the possibility of a life-threatening accident at Eticam.

She said there are plenty of other worries in Granite City, such as other industries presenting potential hazards.

"I'm worried more about the helicopters and other things stored at the U.S. Army Melvin Price Airport than about Eticam," Marcus said.

With the current level of unemployment, Marcus said the city should do everything in its power to attract industry to this area.

Kathy Andria, Marcus neighbor, has been an outspoken opponent of the proposed plant, has addressed the council about the issue a number of times in the past two months, has organized a coalition in opposition to the facility, and has been a favorite subject of the media.

Marcus said Andria presents her view as if it were the common opinion of all her neighbors. But that isn't the case, Marcus said, and the controversy has had an adverse effect on the neighborhood.

Partney questions payment practice

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

Did the city government pay a bill too soon?

Ward 4 Alderman Dan Partney said he was "bickering" Tuesday when he questioned City Comptroller Gene Logas about the city's June 10 release of a $47,653 check to Insultin Missouri Inc., nearly a full month before the City Council formally approved the expenditure.

The release of the check was not approved until Tuesday night, when the council voted unanimously to pay the city's bills for the month of June, Partney said.

Partney called the action not only a bad practice, but also illegal.

But, while Partney had his tongue planted firmly in cheek when he brought attention to the matter, the question could be a valid one, Partney said.

"I was going through the bill list, and this one just jumped out at me," he said. "If my name was on this check, I would be indicted."

Partney said, also only half-jokingly, that the city's release of funds prior to City Council approval was a bad practice, but also said it is "not a common practice" for the city.

He said he was not aware of the reason for this specific early distribution, but the action may have been taken to avoid a finance charge for late payment.

"Ninety-nine point-nine percent of the time, that is the reason," Partney said.

Mayor plans 'town meeting'

By Bob Slate
Staff writer

Mayor Von Dee Cruse wants to hear the voice of the people.

Cruse has scheduled a "town hall meeting" for 7 p.m. Tuesday, July 14, in the City Council chambers at City Hall.

"All over the country, people are down on government at all levels. I believe, in Granite City, we don't deserve the feeling (people) may have for federal and state government."

"It's not healthy," Cruse said. "Maybe we can rectify some of those feelings."

He said the meeting will be an open forum for all citizens to express their concerns directly to himself and city department heads.

"We need to do this to give the people the opportunity to express their concerns directly to me."

To maintain order at the meeting, those wishing to speak will be asked to sign their name and proposed topic of discussion on a registration pad. They will then be called on in a logical order.

Authorities will check convicted killer's story

Authorities will investigate convicted highway killer Gene Arnett's claim that another man fired the shots that killed one motorist and wounded another in 1987.

Madison County Assistant State's Attorney Robert Trone said Arnett, 33, a Granite Cityan, implicated the other man, a passenger in his car, in a meeting Tuesday in Edwardsville.

Arnett had requested the meeting through his attorney, Madison County Public Defender John Rekowski. Arnett said he has found God in prison and wants to "set the record straight."

Trone said Arnett told him he was driving when the other man fired a shotgun at two cars on interstate highways in Madison County on Oct. 24, 1987. The two planned to rob the victims, Arnett told Trone.

"We're checking to see if we can verify or corroborate it," Trone said. He added that the investigation may be wrapped up in about 30 days.

Trone said Arnett, whom he described as "real calm" during the interview, did not ask for anything in return.

Todd Scrum of Granite City, a 21-year-old student at Quincy College, was driving on Interstate 270 near Granite City when he was fatally shot.

About 15 minutes earlier, Edward Houser, 36, of Ottawa was wounded by a shotgun blast as he drove on Interstate 55-70 east of Edwardsville.

Arnett was sentenced to 40 years in prison after a jury convicted him of first-degree murder in the Scrum shooting.

Arnett is also serving a life term at the state prison in Joliet after pleading guilty to the fatal beating of 28-year-old convenience store clerk Nancy Bennett of Troy during a holdup in Ponton Beach on Oct. 22, 1987.

He also received a 40-year term after pleading guilty to attempted murder in a critically wounding a service station attendant in Granite City with a shotgun in November 1987.

Braun warmly greeted

By Mike Chambers
Staff writer

Democratic Senate nominee Carol Moseley Braun took a stand on many issues Tuesday night in a town meeting held at the Belleville Area College Theater in Belleville.

Vowing to give government "a healthy dose of democracy," Braun outlined her views to an estimated gathering of 180 people.

Her answers to questions from the audience drew warm applause.

On the abortion issue, she told the capacity crowd, "I believe in freedom of choice. Because of my religion, I am pro-life. ... But we live in a democracy and not a theocracy, so that is a separate issue."

Woman's missing purse returned

By John J. Winkelman
Staff writer

For a few hours Monday morning, Vicki Elmore feared she would never see her purse again. But, fortunately, as she said, "There are some good people in Granite City."

Donald Valencia of Granite City stopped in at Aldi's store at about 9 a.m. Monday and went to get a cart to take in with him to do his shopping.

"I saw something in the cart, and I thought it was a piece of paper or a plastic bag," Valencia said. "I said I don't want that one, that it has trash in it."

But Valencia decided to look more closely and noticed it was a woman's purse. He found a card inside, checked the directory and dialed the woman's telephone number.

No answer. He repeatedly called the number he found, but kept getting the same result.

His search for the rightful owner brought him to the Press-Record office.

"I've been trying to contact her," he said. "I guess she's been out looking for it."

One more telephone call. Success.

"Is this Vicki?" I found your purse. Everything is intact. I'm at the Press-Record office. So went one side of the conversation.

He hung up the telephone. She said she would be right down. She said she has been worried sick over this," Valencia said.

Elmore carried an empty purse and an empty face into the office where her when Valencia pulled the missing purse from the plastic bag he had been carrying it in. Elmore's smile shined brightly.

"I can't say 'thank you' enough," she said. "I'm just a big happy girl."

She said the purse contained cash, bank statements and credit cards.

Elmore said she had carried her car keys in her skirt pocket, and it wasn't until she was home from the store that she realized her purse was not with her. Several years ago, she said, she lost a purse that she never recovered.

"I thought it was the last time I'd seen this purse," she said. But this time it ended up in good hands. "There are some good people in Granite City," she said.

Valencia, a 15-year-old resident, was one of 16 children. He said he knew what it was like to lose something and to not have everything.

"I come from a large family. I know how important people's belongings are. This is how your Mom and Dad bring you up," Valencia said.

Elmore said she also was on the other end of a similar story, when dining out at a local restaurant one time.

"I found a man's ring and took it to the manager. The man returned while I was still there. He said he was going to get that beautiful ring back, but no happier than I am today," Elmore said.

Club

Deja Vu's proposal stated it was in need of increased sales taxes of between $200 and $300 annually. Actually, the committee said, if the club grossed $5 million annually, the most the city would get would be $50,000 total. And after subtracting the city's current share, the actual increase would be considerably less.

Also, the committee noted, all sales tax from the property is now tied up in preserving the outcome of a lawsuit filed by St. Clair County concerning the legality of the annexation by Madison.

Deja Vu's proposal states the city would receive increased real estate property tax as a result of the improvements. The committee found that the most the assessment could increase would be a third of the cost of any improvements. The committee also said that, since the city has levied a general corporate tax, this would not actually result in any general revenue.

The DeJa Vu proposal calls for a special city license fee of $20,000 a year or "whatever the city desires."

The committee concluded that, while the size of the fee would discourage other club owners from applying for a similar license and therefore reduce the chances of making the fee would be considered "arbitrarily and artificially high" and therefore not legally defensible.

The committee also found that such a license fee would leave the city open to federal lawsuits.

Ban

U.S. Supreme Court is so "ambiguous."

Gerard said he had not studied the Madison ordinance and therefore had no opinion on it in particular, but agreed to discuss the issue in general.

The U.S. Supreme Court, Gerard said, has ruled that nude dancing can, in some forms and in some cases, be a form of expression protected by the First Amendment.

"The question is whether it is protected enough that, if a community doesn't want it, (the community) can be forced to allow it," Gerard said.

A community does not have to permit all forms of protected speech. One thing that is clear is that a community can restrict nude dancing and that type of activities by zoning. What is not clear is whether a community can forbid it altogether.

Gerard said one reason there is so much confusion is that, in the often-cited Supreme Court case, Schad vs. Borough of Mount Ephraim (1982), the opinion of the court says communities may not ban activities considered to be protected speech.

"That if you read the decision, alleged illegal restriction of trade."

Deja Vu's proposal said the site is a public location because it is not near the city proper nor near any homes, schools or churches. The committee found that the location is behind a race track that offers family entertainment and across the highway from a truck stop that remains plagued by unwanted prostitution.

In addition, the committee made the following findings concerning the proposed operation:

• Operation of the proposed facility would require increased law enforcement costs in the area. The committee said the fact that DeJa Vu plans to have a 35-man security force indicates DeJa Vu anticipates problems.

• Because the city has a limited number of police officers responding to problems at the proposed facility would have to be pulled from the city proper, potentially leaving it unprotected.

• Large crowds at the new facility would lead to an increased potential for traffic violations, including driving under the influence of alcohol, on Madison streets.

• There is a potential for spill-over problems from the facility, including prostitution and illegal drug sales and use.

• The cases of persons arrested at the facility would be within the jurisdiction of the St. Clair County Sheriff's Office, requiring police officers to go to Belleville for prisoner transportation, hearings and other matters.

• The city officials elected in 1989, at a time the city had already expanded into St. Clair County, were elected on a platform that included the observance and the stand against allowing nude dancing in the city. As a result, that election, the committee said, confirmed the values and intentions of the community.

"There are other communities in the area which now have establishments offering nude dancing, and the community would undoubtedly allow DeJa Vu to operate there. As a result, the committee found, Madison should not be forced to change its values to allow DeJa Vu to operate."

For these reasons, we feel allowing the proposed club to operate would create a burden on the community in the form of increased law enforcement costs and problems and represent "denial of the values established by the community," Amisich said.

"And we believe the promised financial benefits of the club to the city are, at best, a drop in the bucket and, at worst, a light of fancy."

The City Council voted unanimously to accept the findings of the committee.

Mayor John Belicoff, who strongly opposed the proposal, thanked the committee for all of its work and said the members were coming in offering topics remaining calm and objective while under intense pressure.

"These three men have done an outstanding job for the community and I think we need to let them know that," Belicoff said as the crowd gave the committee a standing ovation.

which was a plurality, only three justices said that five justices — this was a typical Burger Court disaster — said a small community can without question ban nude dancing," Gerard said.

"Since that time, when one member of the court or another cited Schad, do they mean the plurality opinion or the majority feeling? It's a mess."

It is not a patently unconstitutional to put restrictions on protected speech, Gerard said.

For example, he said, a community can require a newspaper to be located in an commercial part of town. And if a group wants to hold a parade, it is usually required to get a permit.

"The fact that nude dancing might be protected speech doesn't tell a thing about whether it is constitutional," he said.

One thing about which there is no doubt, Gerard said, is that nude dancing can be banned in places licensed to serve alcohol.

"One of the reasons why this is only my opinion and I can only support it with anecdotal material," one of the reasons the law is so screwed up today is because government attorneys have not fought in court the way they should have," Gerard said.

"What has happened in the past, and I could cite you more than a hundred examples, is that a community will have an ordinance on the books, some tavern owner comes in offering topics dancing, and claims it is protected speech. And the city attorneys will concede it is protected speech and the court will have to start from there."

Gerard said that, if one looks at the definition of obscenity, it includes "lewd exhibition of the genitals," which Gerard said seems pretty clear. Gerard said the burden of showing that speech is protected is on the person participating in the activity and not on the government.

"Why don't the city attorneys come in and deny it is protected speech?" he asked.

"They could say to the plaintiff, 'If it's protected, you prove it. What is the message?'"

"There is a whole series of questions used to determine if speech is protected. But they never reveal it," Gerard said.

"If, in this case, the city's attorneys are willing to defend their position in court, I say, 'Good. More power to them.'"

"Let's get the issue litigated for once. It would be nice."

Judge orders removal of rail cars of municipal waste

By Bonita Tillman
Staff writer

Rail cars of municipal waste shipped into a Conrail switching yard in Fairmont City were ordered removed by 11 p.m. Wednesday night after testimony about possible health dangers.

St. Clair County Associate Judge James M. Radcliffe issued a temporary restraining order earlier Wednesday against TENNSV Inc., Conrail Corp. and CWI Inc., ordering the companies to:

- Retrain from transporting any additional rail cars of trash to the Conrail facility.
- Immediately and properly dispose of the waste and drainage which has leaked to the ground from the boxcars.
- Inform the Illinois Environmental Protection

Agency with written notice that the debris has been removed and properly disposed, including the destination of the trash.

He also ordered CWI Inc., the company which attempted to haul the trash to a Staunton landfill, not to transfer any more of the trash from the site.

"This is a site within 1,000 feet of a residential area. I find numerous violations of the EPA statutes, and the operation at Conrail site is without a permit to do either transfers or storage," Radcliffe said.

Attorney Joel Poole represented TENNSV Inc., which shipped the material. He said he wasn't sure if Christian County would take the debris as suggested by the judge. However, Radcliffe was adamant.

"I don't care, I want them out of here," the judge said.

A second hearing will be held at 10 a.m. July 14 to determine if the companies have complied with the court order and whether further action is necessary.

Fairmont City Police Chief Scott Penny said he lives with 750 feet of the debris and he finds the odor "very offensive."

Penny said his son cannot even go out to play in the daytime without insect repellent on him because of the massive number of flies in the area.

Despite complaints from neighbors, Penny said he was told by a marketing representative at Conrail's main office that more trash would be brought to Fairmont City.

"They said the trash would continue indefinitely," he said.

Penny said he checked the Conrail facility before the hearing Wednesday and found 104 loaded containers of trash with open hatching on top. At least 15 of them had come in the previous evening, he said.

Kenneth Mensing, regional manager of the IEPA, said he has inspected the Conrail site three times in four days and found some containers in very poor condition.

The floor of one container was missing and a rotting odor, maggots and flies and drainage water (leachate) were visible around the boxcars.

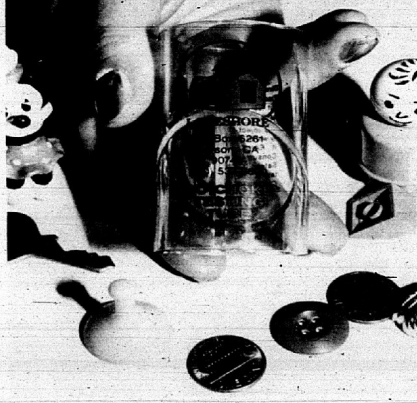

"It's our position this is being used as a storage facility and they don't have a permit for that. I believe this is a substantial threat," Mensing said.

If an object is able to fit inside the tube, then it is too small for a child to safely play with.

Citizens' association starts new Venice youth program

By Mike Chambers
Staff writer

Keeping kids off the streets and out of trouble is a tall order, but local citizens have banded together to try to do just that.

The Citizens Youth Association, a group of more than 30 volunteers from Venice and Madison, has joined together with local leaders to combat the temptations of crime, said the association's president, Mike Terrell.

"We're trying to get the kids doing positive things that they don't have a chance to do before," Terrell said.

"We're trying to get as many kids involved in our social activities, to get them off the street corners, build their self-esteem and improve their attitudes toward society in general."

One of the ways volunteers are trying to get young people off the streets is a summer baseball league, something Venice hasn't had in years, Terrell said.

The league is sponsored by the Madison County Housing Authority.

Terrell said organizers have signed up more than 60 kids for the co-ed league.

But he said that, because there hasn't been an organized baseball league in Venice for years, in some cases organizers have run into some problems with the younger players, such as teaching the fundamentals.

"We're working on fundamentals with some of the younger ones like 'This is a glove. It goes on this hand. This is a bat. Here's how you hold it,'" Terrell said. But overall, he thinks the program has been a success.

"We have a lot of volunteers who are very good with the kids," he said.

"You can see a change in some of the kids already. It's going to have an impact on everyone," Terrell said of the program.

A summer league is definitely something that's needed here in Venice," said Venice Superintendent of Schools John Rush. "It's good to see there are interested people around here to fill the void for children in the summer."

Rush has worked with the association, donating a school bus for one of the trips to baseball games at Busch Stadium the association has organized.

Besides the summer ball league, the association also has a Monday and Thursday "social night" at the Venice Recreation Center, located at 833 Broadway, between 5 and 10 p.m. for ages 12-18.

The night includes board games, activities and a special one-hour drug and alcohol abuse seminar.

Terrell, a Venice alderman, said the group plans to create activities for kids year-round as well.

"The association plans nine one-hour drug and alcohol seminars, taught by volunteers with a background in drug and alcohol awareness. The seminars will include personal counseling, films and a tour of the Madison County Jail."

"By the way, we hope that they can see what happens if they become involved in drugs," said Donald Tucker, the association's vice president.

"A lot of our kids see these people (dealers) driving around in nice cars and dressing nice, but they don't see a lot of what happens when they get caught," Tucker said.

"They all see the glamorous side, but they don't see the dark side. By this awareness program, we are going to show them the dark side," he said.

Terrell said the group is still actively recruiting volunteers for the association.

The Citizens Youth Association holds meetings on every third Monday at 6 p.m. in the Venice Senior Citizens Center, Klein and Brown streets.

Much of the work the group is doing wouldn't have been possible without donations from many area businesses, Terrell said.

More than 20 businesses in the Venice and Madison area have donated money and equipment for the baseball league along with some of the games the association has purchased for the activity program.

SIUE will see cut in state support

SPRINGFIELD — Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville ended up with a cut in state support for next school year but tuition increases will more than make up any shortfall.

SIUE's share of the state budget's general revenue fund dropped to $44.8 million in the fiscal year that began July 1. The funding is down about $1.7 million from last year's state budget.

The cut is expected to be more than offset by revenue from a 12.5 percent tuition hike. The boost in tuition rates is expected to reap an additional $3.1 million.

SIUE's overall budget for the new fiscal year is $66.89 million, budget director Dan Corbett said Monday.

After a January cut in state support, SIUE's overall spending level for the fiscal year that ended June 30 was $65.43 million, Corbett added.

The university at the direction of President Earl Lazerson has restricted the revenue from the tuition increase to the areas of library acquisition, computing and instructional equipment and additional faculty where needed, Corbett said.

An effort will be made to reallocate money to grant a 2 percent raise to faculty and staff this year, Corbett said.

Weber asks high court to intervene

SPRINGFIELD — Republican Illinois Supreme Court candidate Don Weber is asking the high court to overturn the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate him.

Weber, of rural Edwardsville, petitioned the court Monday for the order.

"It's an outrage, and it should be stopped," he said. "It's pure politics at its worst."

Madison County Chief Circuit Judge Paul Riley recently appointed Belleville lawyer Richard Sturgeon to investigate perjury allegations against Weber.

Sturgeon has said the statute of limitations runs out July 18 and that he must complete the investigation by then.

Riley acted in response to a petition by Belleville lawyer Amiel Cuelo, a longtime political foe of Weber.

Riley said there would be a conflict of interest if Madison County State's Attorney William Haine's office investigated the matter, because Weber was employed by Haine at the time of the alleged offense.

"There is absolutely no conflict of interest for the state's attorney," Weber again argued in his petition to the Supreme Court. "There was no crime. There is no perjury in this case. The elected state's attorney decided there was nothing to this so they hired a buddy of Cuelo's."

Cuelo claims Weber or St. Louis psychiatrist Dr. Edwin Wolgram may have committed perjury in connection with a 1989 deposition by Wolgram in a libel suit Weber filed against Cuelo.

Deja Vu asset to Madison?

Larry Troesch, author of the Deja Vu's proposal to offer topless and bottomless dancing at a club in Madison, figures that if he has done nothing else he has brought the citizens of Madison back into city government.

Troesch has attended about six times more Madison City Council meetings this year than most of the 400 citizens who attended Tuesday night's meeting.

He is acquainted with the city's plans for the former Dunbar school, the new emergency vehicle for the fire department and the leaking roof at the Third Street ball diamond.

When those issues were mentioned briefly Tuesday, all but a handful of the audience, a handful that included Troesch, were hearing about them for the first time. When the City Council discussed those issues previously, and when it discussed Deja Vu's proposal, the audience, including media, had numbered less than 10 and once numbered only one.

When more than 300 people turned out for a public hearing on the Deja Vu proposal Monday night, many of them said they had only heard of it in the past week or two. This, despite the fact that it has been in the works for nearly seven months and has been widely reported by the media since the end of May.

Troesch said he was impressed by the crowd of several thousand people in other communities, is not easily impressed. Usually, he said, the crowds are made up of busloads of church congregations led by fired-up, Bible-thumping ministers.

Madison was different, he said. The people who showed up seemed to be a cross section of the community. Troesch said he believes that the people were citizens who were proud of their community and were genuinely concerned about the effect Deja Vu's proposal would have on their neighborhood and neighborhood values.

Troesch, obviously, is disappointed that the citizens and City Council turned down his proposal. He believes the fears of the citizens are unfounded and that Deja Vu and its revenue could have been a real asset to Madison.

And may be an asset yet. Troesch and Deja Vu have conceded the battle, but say the war is far from over. Ultimately, it may end up in the courts, where it is likely a judge who may not be able to find Madison on a map will decide whether the people of Madison are capable of deciding what's good for their community and whether the government of Madison is able to pass laws enforcing that decision.

The judge will base his or her decision on what is perceived as being in the best interest of the entire community. If the Madison law is viewed as anything other than a reflection of the entire community — regardless of individual political views, and whether the individuals vote or not — it is possible that Deja Vu's argument that it would be an asset to the community will prevail.

Madison stood together as a community this week and, as a result, was victorious. But this is no time to sit back and rest on its laurels.

As Madison Mayor John Belloff is fond of saying, "The City Council meets every Tuesday and all of the meetings are open to the public. You don't have to wait for a big issue to come to a meeting; you're welcome any time. We'd like to see you and hear from you again."

Stand up, take action on behalf of harmony among all people

The following column is by U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, written by Christopher R. Browning. It is the story of a group of mostly middle-aged men, too old for combat, who were drafted by the Nazis during World War II to form Police Battalion 101, which took charge of part of Poland when German soldiers occupied that country.

The book is good to read, but not pleasant to read. These ordinary men were ordered to kill Jews in small Polish communities, sometimes one-third to one-half the population of a town, and to kill any Poles who hid the Jews.

Their commander told the men who did not want to participate in the killings that they did not have to, and 10 to 20 percent refused. In less than three years, the battalion killed 30,000 Jews. And they forced onto trains to concentration camps — and death — another 45,000.

Even though Hitler's propaganda had been building hatred of Jews, I read the account and wondered: How could they do it? Why didn't they stand up?

The book relates: "The battalion had orders to kill Jews, but each individual did not. Yet, 80 to 90 percent of the men proceeded to kill. Though most of them at least initially were horrified and disgusted by what they were doing. To break ranks and step out, to adopt overtly nonconformist behavior, was simply beyond most of the men. It was easier for them to shoot."

While not all of them joined in the shooting, when it came to herding Jews into freight trains destined for concentration camps, all participated. Distance from the ultimate fate of the Jews eased their conscience on that.

Distance from tragedy makes killing easier. I remember the World War II veteran who told me, "I don't think I could look down the barrel of a gun and kill someone. But I dropped bombs on German cities. I did not have to see the victims."

When Hitler spouted his racial hatred, too few stood up to him. Christians and Jews were not coming together in Germany, as they should have, to understand one another better, to resist Hitler's poison. History asks the unanswered question: Why didn't they stand up — together?

All of this has something to do with us today. After at least two decades of improved race relations in the United States, 1960 to 1980, the last decade has been a downward path — not dramatically so, but downward nevertheless.

This reality is compounded by the increasing stockpiling of the poor into our big cities and then ignoring them. The Los Angeles riot was not sparked only by the unbelievable Rodney King verdict. It was sparked by a sense of hopelessness on the part of many, particularly minority young people.

The combination of deteriorating race relations and growing hopelessness is potentially explosive.

How can we avoid moving in the direction of a repetition of the evils of past history? Let me suggest three things:

1. When anyone demeans a group — Christians, Jews, African-Americans, Polish-Americans, Hispanic-Americans, Italian-Americans, Arab-Americans or any other group — indicate your disapproval of such talk. And don't laugh at "jokes" that make fun of a group.

2. Reach out. Too many white families have never had a black family in their home, and too many black families have never had a white family in their home. That's not dramatic, but it's important. The same goes for Jews, Arabs, and Hispanics, Jews and Arabs, and the list goes on. Reach out so that you and others understand more clearly that people are people, with the same hopes and yearnings and fears.

3. Take an interest in programs that help the less fortunate in our society, not just with "handouts" which sometimes are necessary, but with jobs and quality education and decent housing.

Our political system has become increasingly self-centered, rather than inclusive, and that ultimately hurts all of us.

Act. Don't let history ask the question about us: "Why didn't they stand up?"

Politicians may outsmart selves

TO THE EDITOR:

I watched in complete disgust as the June 16 council meeting as the mayor and several council members, including Mrs. Whitaker, attacked Clayton Harrison, the superintendent of streets, concerning the cleanup of the dropoff points for the citizens to drop off their grass clippings.

It is unrealistic to believe that several members of the city council and the mayor are continuing to attack Harrison verbally for a fiasco that he in the very beginning did not create. The only involvement that he had, out of the goodness of his heart, was to try to assist the city in cleaning up this mess.

What really dismays me is that, first of all, in creating these bins, and I believe that was Mrs. Whitaker's project, the city actually violated their own ordinance. 8-32-020, the ordinance file indicates that metal containers are required for garbage. 8-32-020 involves depositing garbage. 8-32-040, lawful disposal sites. 8-32-050, violation and penalty. 8-32-060, uncovered refuse.

Furthermore, the director of public works had sent a memorandum to the Sanitation Committee the day before the June 16 council meeting notifying them that he was in receipt of a letter from Madison County Solid Waste Management, that the city was in violation of Illinois Environmental Protection Agency rules in putting these grass clippings, leaves, etc., in open areas of this nature.

There were instructions in this letter on page two that told the city to immediately cease all open dumping at the site. Secondly, they were told to remove all waste to an IEPA-permitted landfill and were given 30 days to do this.

Therefore, Mayor Cruse, Sue Bacon, Mr. MacTaggart and Vincent along with Mrs. Whitaker and several others, were well aware of this memorandum prior to the council meeting.

Why they would attack Harrison is nothing but pure absolute political lies, to try to discredit Mr. Harrison and cause the citizens to believe that this whole fiasco was just Harrison's fault and not the city of Granite City's fault.

I, as a committee of one, support Harrison. I supported him during his campaign for election. I support him in his effort to do the very best job that he has done for the city, and I deplore the alderpersons and mayor making this type of an attack on him.

What the mayor and some of the alderpersons had better realize before it's too late is that Harrison was elected by the people, for the people and of the people. Our political system still requires people to elect their representatives, alderpersons, or mayor, etc.

The people of Granite City made an effort to send the message to City Hall when they elected Harrison. I would urge City Hall to take note of that message if they're concerned with their political careers.

The attack on Harrison was made by city officials knowing full well that they had already been instructed to shut this fiasco down. It's obvious there's a vendetta against Harrison.

It goes back to the mayor and some of the council trying to force an ordinance to be passed to eliminate the job of street superintendent and make that position more of the mayor's appointments, after the people of Granite City, duly elected Harrison to office.

It makes one wonder if Granite City is truly a democratic society or if we're living by some foreign country rule, that if you're not satisfied with who the people elected, you merely eliminate that job and therefore put that elected official out of office arbitrarily and capriciously.

It sickens me to see what has happened to our great city with "politics as usual."

I implore the council and mayor to consider the citizens and not their subjective personal politics.

I am very doubtful this will occur until perhaps April 1983. From the world I've heard on the street — in April 1983 or shortly thereafter, there will be numerous new faces on that council and perhaps they will listen to the people who pay the taxes and vote.

It's obvious that several of our current officials have forgotten who pays their salary. People deserve officials who will vote for the betterment of the people. One alderman at a city council meeting had the audacity to say he got enjoyment out of telling one of our citizens, who had come to a trash site, to load the bags back up in his car, as he inadvertently had brought some rubbish to be disposed of.

This alderman may have been well within his authority to tell this gentleman, whoever he might be, to take his dead rubbish to be bagged and load it back up in his car. But for him to openly and blatantly state that he enjoyed doing that or got some enjoyment from it is absolutely mind-boggling.

Is this what it's all about, that some of the city officials actually get enjoyment out of this sort of thing?

Do they not understand it's we people who elected them and it's we people who can defeat them at the polls?

They'll know next April. They'll learn a very bitter lesson.

Former pastor alienated people

TO THE EDITOR:

I am a member of Tri-City Park Tabernacle. You know, "the church that has done Eddy Brown so wrong."

I have read all the sympathetic articles you have published with his face plastered on your pages and, frankly, just shake my head and laugh. However, in the June 25 paper, he said the church owes him $10,000 in severance pay. At the state meeting, I am infuriated and must respond.

Did he tell your reporter why the church owes him such an ungodly amount? He was the pastor there for three years. He took the church down the sewer, music pastor of the church for 11 years, he gave him three weeks vacation pay and called it "severance pay."

The way I see it, Eddy Brown set a precedent regarding severance pay. Why don't you print these kinds of facts in your newspaper?

Tri-City Park Tabernacle has been an upstanding church for more than half a century in Granite City. You know it and so does the entire town.

So, is this man from Mississippi being assisted by your paper, also a part of Granite City for many years, to drag it and its people through the mud?

I understand your commitment and obligation to print stories of news value. However, along with news value, shouldn't you get and keep all the facts straight?

Honestly, I don't understand why you give him so much attention. In my opinion, it only eggs him on.

Closing of pool deprives teens

TO THE EDITOR:

I just wanted to express my opinion. For a town that is so interested in the DARE (anti-drug) program, I feel that the closing of the pool at Wilson Park really took away a great recreational activity.

I am sure that, with nothing to do during the summer, a lot of the 12- to 15-year-olds will turn to other forms of recreation that may not be as legal as swimming.

Quite a lot of money was spent for a gazebo that hardly gets any use. Could that money have been spent to repair the pool?

Which would have got more use? There are a lot of parents, and people who do not even have children, who are very upset over the building of the gazebo instead of using the money for the pool.

In addition, it is my opinion that the park could have made arrangements to allow alternatives for children in the park district. One suggestion would be to provide a "drop-in" on a daily basis to another pool.

It may be they could have made some sort of arrangements with Faddlers to give the public a few hours to swim. Another alternative would be to rent from the YMCA for different periods of time for the public to swim.

I feel that to keep the drug and alcohol problem down in the teen-ages, we should provide them with some good wholesome forms of drug-free activities. The pool was a great help, many of us think.

There are no activities for children between the ages of 13 and 16 that encourage them to stay out of trouble, except organized sports. Even that is limited or closed at this age range.

This is the most important age range, as this is the time that children begin turning to drugs and alcohol.

Why doesn't Granite City care more, to provide for these children?

Fears proposed plant by Eticam

TO THE EDITOR:

People of Granite City and communities close by, do not be fooled any longer by the local politicians.

I believe that, unless we take action right away, a hazardous waste plant, Eticam, will be built on the proposed site. God help us. One mishap, and we can all leave this old world or, worse yet, suffer for years.

So, get out the pen and paper. I have a list of people for you to write to, and ask for their help.

U.S. Senators, Paul Simon, 462 Dirksen Building, Washington, D.C. 20510-1302; Alan Dixon, 331 Hall Building, Washington, D.C. 20510-1301.

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, 119 Cannon Building, Washington, D.C. 20515-1321.

Illinois State Senator, Sam Vadalabene, 1218 Capitol Building, Springfield, Ill. 62706.

Illinois State Reps.: Sam Wolf, Rm. 2040 Stratton Building, Springfield, Ill. 62706; Jim McPike, State Capitol Building, Springfield, Ill. 62706; Monroe Flinn, Room 2046 Stratton Building, Springfield, Ill. 62706; Wyvetter Young, State Capitol Building, Springfield, Ill. 62706.

Ill. EP John D. Williams, Agency Hearing Office, Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, 2200 Churchill Blvd., Post Office Box 19276, Springfield, Ill. 62794-9276.

Also, I ask the mayor of Granite City, all the aldermen and anyone else connected to this project to write to these officials listed above. Further, I would like a copy of their letters published in the Press-Record/Journal.

Swimming 'great equalizer' for handicapped

By Amber M. Rogers
Correspondent

It didn't take much coaxing for the eager youths to show off their newly-learned aquatic skills. They took to Gary and Paula Burns' bright blue pool on Friday much as little fish take to water.

Little fish, however, do not face the challenges that these young swimmers do. All of the 17 swimmers who performed in the show-and-tell swim meet Friday are handicapped, some physically, others mentally.

But nothing stopped these enthusiastic students from showing to the supportive audience of parents, relatives and friends what they had learned from the month-long swimming class sponsored by the American Red Cross and led by special education teacher Jo Higgins.

"Every June, we have a handicapped swim program. Water is such a great equalizer. Kids in wheelchairs who can't walk on land, get in the water and walk. We have blind students, mentally handicapped students, anyone who wants to join," said Higgins, the group supervisor and one of the three founders of the swimming program, which began 17 years ago.

Higgins, along with Mike Jessee and the late Dr. David Friedman of Granite City, decided that the handicapped should have the opportunity to learn to participate in aquatic activities and to gain the benefits of water as the equalizer which Higgins spoke of.

Higgins now supervises the program, but says that — without the help of the many volunteers — the swimming class could not exist. The swimming pool used is the property of Gary and Paula Burns, who donate the pool every year for the month of June. Paula Burns is the daughter of the late Roger Bowler, proprietor of Bowler Trucking. The Bowlers originally donated the same pool that Paula Burns now donates.

"They need the place to swim, and if you have it, you share it. As long as a Bowler lives here, these kids will have a place to swim," said Paula Burns. She received a certificate of thanks from the Red Cross after the show-and-tell ended.

On average, the program has 26 to 30 swimmers and 17 to 25 volunteers each year. The lessons are taught in four sessions, four times daily for 45 minutes each, on Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. throughout June, said Ron Laboray, a longtime volunteer who is himself blind and has lost one arm.

"Our main goal," said Laboray, "is to work with each swimmer on an individual basis and get them conditioned to the water. It is also a great social opportunity for these kids to get together and make friends."

Molly Kirksey, a nine-year-old student who participated in the program for the first time, loves it, according to her mother, Cathy Kirksey.

"She's used to the water. She loves it, and she is floating better now and breathing better. I think these people here are just great. They have a lot of patience and good, good attitudes, and we'll be back next year."

Cathy Kirksey said. Molly was one of the first to show-and-tell Friday morning what she had learned during the month. And when she told everyone to "please watch me now," the crowd laughed loudly while Higgins, narrator throughout the entire proceedings, called Molly "our little director who tells us what to do."

For other students, such as 20-year-old Jim Taylor, who has participated since 1976, merely being able to be put in the pool to float and walk was his "show-and-tell."

Jim suffers from severe cerebral palsy. Although his body is resigned to a wheelchair and his voice cannot form real words, his smile as he was lowered into the pool — and the happy noises he made — were proof that the physically disabled benefit from the aquatic activities that the program offers.

Jim's volunteer student instructor for several years has been Brandi Snelson, a 1992 graduate of Granite City High School who has been a volunteer with the program for nearly five years. "I've worked with Jimmy since I've been here, and I think that having the same kids as your students every year makes you want to come back."

"I want to come back and help Jimmy progress. I like to think that I can see him improving every year, and I have to come back and work here to make sure he does," Snelson said.

Volunteering is no easy job, either. According to Laboray, volunteers undergo a week-long training program and are educated on the proper handling of disabled swimmers.

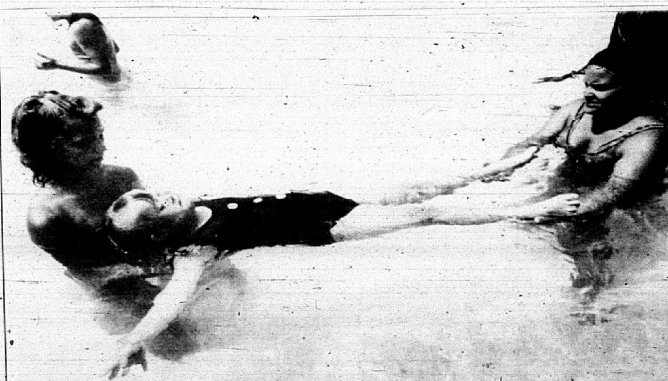

Snelson, for instance, had to learn that cerebral palsy victims sometimes lose control of their neck muscles while their bodies float naturally. A loss of muscle control, said Higgins, causes the head to snap backward into the water, so Snelson and her fellow volunteers must always be aware of the possible dangers involved in putting these students into the water.

The program is so successful that the Special Olympics organization sent eight people to Higgins' program to gain certification as Special Olympics trainers, said Laboray.

"They come to train and, for three days, we show them what we do. Each day they learn how to handle the students, and that is good, since some of them

Raccoon runs wild, but finally captured

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

They tried tuna, oranges and apples. They tried peanut butter and bananas, too, but nothing would lure a raccoon running rampant in Blauquart Jeweler's in Edwardsville into a live trap. Or so it seemed.

Following a 10-day stay in the store, where he would eat the bait without getting caught, the rascally raccoon let his sweet tooth get the best of him.

After a Hershey's chocolate bar with almonds was wired into the trap last Wednesday, Blauquart employees arrived Thursday morning and found the cagey critter in one of two traps that had been set.

"I'm considering buying him a steak and some wine for all of the publicity he's gotten," said Wayne Flesher, manager of Blauquart Jeweler's.

The raccoon wandered into the store June 22 when an employee had left the back door open to enjoy the cooler weather.

During his stay in the store, the raccoon evaded two Edwardsville community service officers. They managed to confine the animal to a storage room where he had escaped into the drop ceiling. Flesher tracked his movements by sprinkling powder on the floor of the room.

Although in his initial romp the raccoon threatened expensive stock, including Waterford crystal, the animal caused neither problems nor damage to the store, Flesher said.

The raccoon is now living in rural Hamel after being released by Rush Madison II of R and M Wildlife Control in Edwardsville. Madison, the son of Ward 2 Alderman Richard Madison, has been in the business since last fall, of capturing pesky raccoons and other wild animals that have wreaked havoc in the area, and then returning them to the wild.

Madison wired the candy bar into the trap that nabbed the animal and also set a second trap in the hope of increasing the odds.

"This is the longest it has ever taken me to catch a raccoon," said Madison, who has about 20 years of trapping experience. "I had one (the previous) week that took about five days."

The previous record-holder was living in a Godfrey resident's garage near the Boy Scouts' Camp Warren Lewis. Madison said that, after the Scouts left the camp, ending a steady food supply, the raccoon was easily baited into a live trap. Madison said he knew it would also just be a matter of time for the Blauquart raccoon.

"He kept walking up just to the edge of the trap so I knew eventually he'd have to walk in and we'd get him," Madison said.

He said the raccoon he captured at Blauquart was "one of the healthiest" he'd ever seen. He was surprised by the animal's full coat, unusual for the summer months.

Madison estimated that the raccoon was between one and two years old.

East St. Louis casino to provide 800 jobs

By Jeffrey Peyton
Staff writer

Eight hundred new jobs.

That's what planners estimate the new Casino Queen riverboat casino will bring to East St. Louis.

City officials and riverboat developers met at City Hall last week to announce that Arch Paddle Boat had purchased what will become the largest riverboat casino in America.

The boat — under construction in Pensacola, Fla. — will be 44 feet long and stuffed from bow to stern with 1,200 gaming stations (the maximum allowed by Illinois law).

The "Casino Queen," according to developer Jim Koman, will feature three enclosed decks and a canopy-covered top deck. The boat can carry up to 3,000 passengers on every outing.

Koman, son of Arch Paddle partner Bill Koman Sr., said the company will start taking applications for the 800-plus jobs sometime in the next two months.

"Those are just the ones we're hiring," Koman said. "That doesn't include all the outside contracting and subcontracting that will be going on."

Koman said the hold-off on hiring is due to the fact that Arch Paddle doesn't have an East St. Louis office yet.

"We're looking for some temporary office space near the riverfront," he said. "We should be moved in the next 60 days, and we'll stay there while our permanent facility is under construction."

Koman said the $18 million Casino Queen will make her maiden voyage Feb. 15, 1993, if everything goes according to plan.

That date can't come soon enough for East St. Louis Mayor Gordon Bush, who is already counting the city's share of the profits.

"This is a giant step toward financial stability for our city and economic empowerment for our citizens," Bush said.

have never actually been hands-on with training them," he said.

The students seemed to put their wholehearted faith in the volunteers as the show-and-tell went on and more students displayed their abilities to the delighted audience.

The oldest student is 22-year-old Dane Gunderson who has been participating for 15 years, said his father, Eugene Gunderson, a teacher at Granite City High School.

"He can swim. He's progressed in that. We'll keep coming back as long as he can," said his father, Eugene Gunderson said.

The audience was captivated, when one of the students, Damon Jackson, stood tall on the diving board and yelled, "Hey, everybody! Watch this. One, two, three."

With a loud splash, Damon dove into the pool, spraying glimmering drops of cool water over the crowd. Damon got out of the water and cried out his loud "Thank you, thank you!" while doing a strong arm flex.

Sue Palmer, a volunteer for seven years, is not new to helping the students gain confidence like that of Damon. Palmer is a teacher's aide for the multiple handicapped, and her son, Zachery Whit, is a Special Olympics swimmer.

"They like to show what they've learned. They want to show whether they can bob, swim, blow bubbles in the water or just dunk their heads. For some of them, they are so proud when they have learned just to dunk their heads," Palmer said. Shirley, a 15-year-old cerebral palsy victim, has been active in the program for four years and her mother, Shirley, said that Jamie loves the opportunity.

"She lives it. It's all she thinks about. She might be able to compete in the Special Olympics. She's really my miracle."

She was born three pounds when she was born and the doctors told me she wouldn't make it. I say she's a miracle," Shirley said.

Prater said as she watched her wheelchair-bound daughter climb out of the pool with almost no help, a major feat for the young swimmer.

While others followed — several blind, others mentally disabled, several wheelchair-bound — the sun continued to shine.

But when the show-and-tell ended and the recognition ceremony began, the bright light that had helped to warm the wet, cheery swimmers faded to gray behind darkening clouds.

Towels were wrapped tighter as certificates of accomplishment were distributed to students and volunteers alike.

"It's a neat program," said Labarey. "You become a part of a big family."

The swimmers keep coming back, and the volunteers are here, come rain or shine. You get to know everybody and you grow to love each other.

"Each person has their own personality, and you learn to listen. It's like a family. It's a neat feeling, for sure."

THE LAW AND YOU

By RICK REED
Attorney At Law

When a husband and wife are divorced, frequently one of the parties will fail to abide by the terms of the judgment of dissolution (divorce decree). The question arises in these cases as to whether the party violating the terms of the divorce decree should be held in contempt of court.

There are several different types of contempt, but the contempt found in a family law case usually falls into the category of indirect civil contempt. This involves a contumacious (stubbornly disobedient), act committed outside the presence of the court, which consists of failing to do something ordered by the court. The Illinois Supreme Court has generally defined contempt of court as conduct calculated to embarrass, hinder or obstruct the court, and to administer justice or lessening the authority and dignity of the court or bringing its administration of law into disrepute.

In one recent case, a father failed to return his 7-year-old daughter to the mother at the end of his six week period of summer visitation. He argued to the court that he had reasonable justification for his actions, and that his actions, therefore, did not constitute willful and contumacious conduct. The court, nevertheless, found him in contempt of court.

The father took the case on appeal, and the Appellate Court noted that the father had kept his daughter beyond the six week visitation period in the past without incident. Furthermore, the Court also found that the daughter had expressed a desire to remain with her father beyond the normal visitation period.

Finally, the Court noted that the mother had never made a direct demand to the father to return the daughter prior to the mother filing her motion for contempt.

Given these circumstances, the Appellate Court vacated the contempt finding entered by the trial court. It is obvious from this case that these matters will be decided on a case-by-case basis. A parent who fails to comply with the terms of the divorce decree is running the risk of being held in contempt of court.

$1 million per new lawyer

That's what economist says attorneys cost us

By Roger McGrath
Correspondent

Each newly minted lawyer costs the economy $1 million. That is, each additional legal eagle reduces the nation's gross national product by $1 million. Economist Stephen Magee further figures that, while two-thirds of American lawyers boost the economy, contributing $660 billion to the GNP, the other one-third knocks $440 billion off the national economy.

The more lawyers, the slower the economy grows, says the University of Texas professor. Lawyers, not surprisingly, disagree. "There is no correlation at all between the number of lawyers and economic growth," says Marc Galanter, law professor and director of the Institute for Legal Studies at the University of Wisconsin.

One of his graduate students analyzed the Magee argument and "found it totally groundless," Galanter says.

So which is it: Are lawyers a help or a drain on the economy? Three separate economic studies come down on the negative side. Magee's analysis is the best known, largely because the Council on Competitiveness, a government committee chaired by Vice President Dan Quayle, has promoted the findings.

Magee maintains the legal profession hurts the economy in several ways:

- Time and money spent answering a legal challenge is no longer available from more productive uses such as research and development.
- High incomes enable students who otherwise would become talented engineers, doctors and executives into the law.
- Excessive product liability litigation discourages innovation and development of new products.

And then there's the lawyer lobby, all those attorney/politicians who dominate federal and state legislatures, plus the judiciary. Each new U.S. representative who's also a lawyer "knocks $1 billion off GNP," Magee told the Suburban Journals.

If the percentage of lawyers in the U.S. House, now 42 percent, dropped to the worldwide average of 15 percent, GNP would get a boost equal to $2,000 for every U.S. worker, he says.

Joins Helmkamp

Thomas Heeger has joined Helmkamp Construction Co. of Wood River as account manager, St. Louis.

Heeger has more than 25 years of experience in industrial construction and plant renovation, specializing in conveyor systems, steel erection and machinery installation, process equipment and concrete foundations.

Heeger

"There's absolutely no truth to that at all," attorney Steve Ringkamp says of Magee's claim that lawyers hurt the economy. He is with The Hulliverson Law Firm, specialists in personal injury cases.

Big business bashes lawyers because legal action drains corporate profits, he argues. Attorneys represent the interests of clients who've been harmed and deserve compensation for their injuries. Ringkamp points specifically to the awards won for asbestos and breast implant victims — which eventually led to elimination of those products.

Mark Levison, attorney with Riezman & Blatz, in Clayton, says the number of attorneys reflects supply and demand. People demand their services, which boosts the supply of attorneys.

A 1989 survey found one lawyer in private practice for every 473 people. In Illinois, the ratio was 1-to-400, in Missouri 1-to-451.

"Lawyers are in a position to encourage litigation, in short, to make work for themselves," says Chris Varvares, economist at Laurence H. Meyer & Associates, Clayton. This can lead to frivolous lawsuits, he says.

Not so, Ringkamp counters. Most attorneys work on a contingency basis, meaning they only get paid if they win the case, which can drag on for years. "Believe me, nobody wants to handle frivolous cases," he says.

The number of civil lawsuits, though, is growing. From 13.6 million cases in 1984, volume increased 27.2 percent to 17.3 million in 1989. Civil filings (divorce and related actions are No. 1, followed by contract disputes and injury cases) climbed 6.4 percent to 18.4 million.

As more and more resources are diverted from productive uses, the economy's growth slows, Magee says. "Every time another litigator is admitted to the bar, society acquires another heat-seeking (lawyer) that does economic damage for 40 years."

That argument steams Levison, president of the Bar Association of Metropolitan St. Louis. "Lawyers do more than any other group," he says. Bar members have hired 52 college-bound, inner city students for summer internships. "I don't see doctors doing it. I don't see plumbers doing it."

Shoebbox partyware offers reasons to celebrate summer

Summertime just became a little more fun with the addition of partyware. Shoebbox Greeting's favorite crabbly old lady, Maxine, Maxine, with her bunny slippers and saucy attitude, is one of the most popular Shoebbox characters, according to Don Tschannen, owner of Jan's Hallmark shop, Crossroads Plaza, Granite City, a Hallmark Gold Crown store.

Maxine has lots of fans because she has the nerve to say what many people would like to say but don't have the nerve to, Tschannen said. Hallmark now has extended Maxine's popularity to partyware to add a dash of humor to summertime celebrations.

For example, one invitation says, "You're invited to a summer party! You'll have food, you'll have fun and, best of all, you won't have to face with your legs tied together."

Party napkins feature Maxine's wit with such sayings as, "The party's not over 'til the neighbors yell."

Other popular Shoebbox characters, the Lundquists, also live up to summer partyware. The story of a couple snoring in lawn chairs is featured on party plates with this message: "Summer brings a song to your heart, a smile to your face, a lawn chair waffle pattern to the back of your thighs."

to rule on abortions. A woman's rights do not vary depending on what state she is in. Texas, as she is in Wisconsin or Minnesota.

On universal health care, "No persons should be deprived of health care because they are poor."

Braun, currently the Cook County recorder of deeds, will face Republican nominee Richard Williamson for Democrat Alan Dixon's 2nd Senate seat in November. Braun defeated Dixon and Al Hufel in the March primary.

The candidate, whose primary victory ended Sen. Dixon's 40-year career as an elected official, said the opposition limiting officials' terms of office "I think the best term limitation is the ballot box," she said.

Kathy Amira, 46, of Granite City, learned from Braun that Braun favors a ban on accepting or shipping out-of-state garbage, such as the New York garbage currently in the Metro East area.

Braun answered questions ranging from her stand on the federal government selling national forest land for logging (which she opposes) to jumping starting the economy (which she said will happen through targeted tax incentives and reducing the capital gains tax).

She criticized both Congress and President George Bush for confirming Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court. She called Bush's action a "quick political fix" and said the Senate acted too slowly in investigating sexual harassment allegations by Anita Hill.

Braun said she chose Belleville as the starting point for a tour of the state "precisely because this is the area in the state where

Trivia

In 1861, the name of Illinois town was changed to East St. Louis. It was the western terminus of the first railroad, built in 1855, to run through Madison County.

Presser nominated to succeed himself

Nominated again during a meeting in Granite City to lead the H. Ross Perot presidential campaign in Madison County, Lee Presser called on Perot's supporters for a "revolution."

"Perot himself means nothing," Presser said Tuesday. "This campaign is not the end. It's the beginning of a revolution in America, and you're the revolutionaries in the revolution."

Presser, of Glen Carbon, was one of four men nominated to be coordinator of the Madison County Perot campaign.

The others were Hugh L. Enyart of O'Fallon, Ivan Schneider of Troy and Dan Counts of Granite City.

Presser, 40, resigned the post last week after pleading guilty to a federal trespassing charge. The charge came as a result of a shoplifting arrest earlier this year at Scott Air Force Base. Presser has said the incident was a mistake.

The group decided not to select an interim coordinator, but will meet again at 7 p.m. Tuesday, July 14, at the restaurant, 3240 Nameoki Road, to make a final selection.

Triplets bounce back to upend Wood River

Westward move a logical change

I'm as much a baseball traditionalist as Bob Costas or anyone else. Give me sunshine, wooden bats, real grass, pitchers hitting for themselves and Camden Yards anytime.

But sometimes change is good for change's sake if nothing else. And so it was that baseball commissioner Fay Vincent earned a gold star in my book Monday by unilaterally deciding to move the Cardinals and Chicago Cubs to the National League West, effective next season.

As any baseball fan not stranded on an anchored desert isle knows by now, the Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves will move to the East. The expansion Colorado Rockies (West) and Florida Marlins (East) will fill out the two seven-team divisions.

Good, good, good.

The Cardinal-Cub rivalry will never be broken if this move is etched in stone. Along with Dodgers-Giants and Yankees-Red Sox, that's baseball's best. But the possibility that WGN are in a huff because the move to the West supposedly means more late starts—on a broadcast, which are seen all over the nation?

The Cubs grumbled about the move and sued, saying the move was "wrong and bad for baseball."

What are they going to succeed? Gee, that would be a shame after all the World Series thrills they've provided in the last 50 years. The Cubbies' 1945 NL flag—their most recent—deserves a big asterisk. Stan Musial spent most of the year in the Navy. Otherwise, the Cardinals would have won, just as they did in 1942, '43, '44 and '46.

The fact is, right now the Cubs and Cardinals play 18 games a year in California. If the National League decides to adopt a balanced schedule like the American League has, the Cubs will be playing 20 games at the most on the coast. Some of those are Sunday afternoons, and the Giants in particular play lots of weekday afternoon games.

The Cubs might end up playing fewer late night games this year than they are now. There's also been talk of more afternoon games on getaway days in California, plus the possibility of those teams instituting a 7 p.m. (9 p.m. here) starting time for night games. Something the Padres already do.

The move also helps the Reds and Braves. Do you think their fans enjoyed the 10:30 p.m. starting times for their California games?

Rivalries? The Cardinals and Cubs are concerned about losing a rivalry with the Mets. Well, it's not like we'll never see them again. And the Dodgers will make up for it. I'm not old enough to remember the Cardinals but the Cardinals and Dodgers had a tremendous rivalry when the Bums frolicked in Brooklyn.

If consistent winning baseball is played by the Cardinals and Cubs (don't hold your breath on the latter), the attendance won't suffer. If the Cardinals are in a pennant race in September, you think attendance will be down because the Astros are in town rather than the Expos? Forget it.

Plus, you won't have to worry about weather on a September road trip to California or the Astro dome.

The balance of power between divisions can change in a big hurry. But for the immediate future, the other teams in the East are getting quite a load dumped on them. The Reds and Braves are without doubt the two best teams in the National League right now. Meanwhile, the West looks wide open for '93.

National Sports columnist Dave Anderson has an even better idea. He proposes the abolishment of the National and American leagues to be replaced by four seven-team divisions: East, North, Central and West. Baseball's three best rivalries would remain intact under Anderson's plan, plus these others would be created: Mets-Yankees, Red Indians-White Sox, Cubs-White Sox, Rangers-Astros, A's-Giants and Dodgers-Angels.

We will then, of course, get rid of the cursed designated hitter and then we'll build about 25 more structures like Camden Yards.

That, my friends, is progress.

Fans satisfied with the Junior Triplets' comeback win over Wood River on Wednesday should have stuck around for more.

The Triplets pulled their own game out of the fire, spotting Wood River a 5-0 lead, then coming back for a 7-5 win at Varsity Field. Catcher John Covarr drove in three runs, including the two decisive tallies with a single in the four-run fifth inning.

Post 113 improved to 13-3 in District 22 play and 17-5 overall heading into this weekend's tournament in Evansville, Ind. (see related story). But it wasn't exactly smooth sailing.

off Randy Scott. A throwing error on a potential double-play ball, second baseman Drake Marshall and another error by Marshall led to three runs.

For the first part of this game, GR had all the markings—of being one of the ugliest ones ever," said manager Ralph Burnett. "We had to do what we have to do to win."

Jeff Miller started and allowed five hits in two innings. Wood River (11-2) got three runs in the second, then single runs in the third and fourth.

Chris Hill threw three shutout innings while his teammates rallied to give him his fifth win of the summer Wednesday.

"I think Drake's having some trouble seeing in the field at night," said Burnett.

The Triplets lost two runners on the bases in the first three innings and looked nearly doomed. Miller had hit leadoff buster Mark Burris while warming up before the game because Burris was standing too close to the plate. Not even that got the home team going—until the fourth.

Winfield's hit rallies Junior Triplets, 5-4

By Brian Henry
Correspondent

It wasn't supposed to be this difficult.

After bombing Wood River 10-4 two weeks ago, the Junior Triplets could have been expected to do the same thing Wednesday night when the teams met at Varsity Field. But this time it took a furious seventh-inning rally to stave off an upset by Wood River as Granite City (18-9 overall, 15-7 in league play) scored three in their last chance to win 5-4.

"The kids thought all they had to do was show up and they'd win," said manager Doug Winfield. "We didn't come out ready to play. They have to be ready every night to play, because there are no easy wins."

Wood River took a 4-2 lead in the fifth and was hanging on until the seventh when everything fell apart for pitcher Chris Brooks.

Donald Harris reached on an error to start the frame. Pinch-hitter Andy Roe walked to bring David Fuhrman, who was trying to bait the runners over. Third baseman Ben Wreath came up with the ball, but his throw hit Fuhrman and the bases were loaded.

Craig Harrison delivered an RBI to make it 4-3. Ron Fisher, running for Roe, scored the tying run on a sacrifice fly from Jason Talley. Harrison and Fuhrman moved up to second and third on a bad throw home.

Brian Kohler was intentionally walked. But Mark Winfield (2-for-3, 2 RBI) thwarted that strategy by lining a single over the center fielder's head.

Chad Dooley (2-1) picked up the win in relief by retiring the side in the seventh. Dooley was the third pitcher of the night, following starter Jeff Kidenour and Erik Tongay.

Kidenour was both overpowering and overly hit in his four-strikeout game. Of the 12 outs he recorded, 10 of them were

Local talent on PSG women's teams

Six Lady Warriors on Scholastic squad

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

Gene Briggs thinks there's no use waiting for next year since there might not be one.

Briggs is the director of soccer for the Southern Region in the Prairie State Games. One thing he would like to see more than anything is for all four Southern teams to win the gold medal in the same year.

It's never happened, so Briggs who coaches the Scholastic Women's team is keeping his fingers crossed for 1992.

"This could be the last year," said Briggs. "With all the budget cuts, there's no guarantee we'll have the Prairie State Games next year. I think our teams have a great shot in all four divisions."

Briggs' immediate concern is the Scholastic women. He loaded his wagon with players from the metro east's top three high school soccer programs. Fifteen of the 18 girls are from Granite City (six), Collinsville (five) and Alton (four).

The girls as far as having all the positions covered," said Briggs, who has coached the Suzanne Stuart (left) and the Scholastic Women's team will try to improve on the bronze medals they've won the past three years in the Prairie State Games.

Mendoza, Open squad want gold medal in his final season

By Mike Kelly
Staff writer

Ruben Mendoza has visions of gold again dancing through his head.

The Southern Region's Open Women's soccer team nearly capped its gold medal at last year's Prairie State Games in Champaign. A scoreless tie with eventual champion North Shore pushed Mendoza's team into the bronze medal match, where it beat West Central 3-0 to earn its third bronze in eight years.

"We should have won it all last season," said Mendoza. "These teams have won two golds and two silvers. We just couldn't finish our plays offensively. But we have all of our players back and some new additions. We'll be in the hunt once again. Only this time I feel we can win it."

Mendoza plans to make this his final year coaching the team. "I think we've earned the respect of the other teams around the state," he said. "The women down here in southern Illinois are playing some homegrown soccer. The game isn't just being played in Granite City and Collinsville, but the other towns in this area are picking it up. That's raised the talent level in our region."

Mendoza features an experienced unit this season.

"Most of our players have been with the team four years or more," he said. "They were and some still are, outstanding players in college. Our greatest asset is controlling the midfield. We don't give up too many chances in our own end."

"All of our players are versatile and they know how to play four-manning style. We just have to put the ball in the net in the big game this season."

Leading the way are veterans Terry Schuler and Patricia Dixon of Granite City.

"They've been with me for 16 combined years," Mendoza said.

Ruben Mendoza "They're excellent leaders on the field, and they know how to encourage our younger players. Terry does an outstanding job controlling the game as a center midfielder. Patricia is an excellent stopper back."

Granite City's Maria Parra, only five feet tall, is considered another gem on the field by Mendoza.

"Her defensive play at left fullback is something to see," he said.

Triplets take aim at Palatine in Evansville tourney opener

By Dave Whaley

Revenge will be on the minds of several teams this weekend in Evansville, Ind.

The Triplets make the jump out Interstate 64 today to take on the five-team Kenny Kent/Old National Bank American Legion Invitational Tournament. There they will see a couple of teams they've seen before, plus the best Kentucky's had to offer.

Joining Post 113 will be Palatine, Ill., whom the Triplets split two games with in the Louisville Slugger Invitational in Danville last month.

Granite City and Palatine play the rubber game of their grudge match tonight at 6 p.m.

The Triplets will also get another look at Eugene Pate of Evansville on Friday at 8:30 p.m. Two years ago Eugene Pate rolled into Granite City on a 22-game winning streak, only to see the Triplets ambush them 10-4. Eugene Pate paid Post 113

Top two teams in round robin competition meet for championship. Third and fourth teams meet for third place. Tiebreakers are head-to-head competition. If more than two teams are tied, tiebreakers are A) least runs given up in tournament; B) most runs scored in tournament; and C) most hits in tournament. If teams are still tied, a coin flip will decide pairings.

The other two teams are defending Kentucky state champion Shelbyville and 1991 Kentucky runner-up Owensboro.

Four of the five teams are guaranteed five games over four days. Only the team with the worst record in round robin competition drops out after Saturday. The teams with the third and fourth best records meet for third place at 1 p.m. Sunday, with the top two teams to meet for the tournament title at 3:30 p.m.

All the action takes place at Evansville's Roscoe Field, a Triple-A ballpark for many years and the backdrop for the filming of "A League of Their Own."

"It's the best field we've played on," said Post 113 manager Ralph Burnett. "It's good to have our guys play in an atmosphere like that. They have runways leading up to the dugout and the whole deal."

Tonight's game against Palatine could be the most interesting. There was a little bad blood between the two teams in Danville.

"They had an attitude we didn't much care for," said Burnett.

(See EVANSVILLE, Page 2B)

Open Sundays — The Granite City Sports Hall of Fame, with the Indian head on the front shown here under the night lights, will be open to the public every Sunday from 1-3 p.m. beginning this week. The Hall of Fame has some new exhibits and was open over the Fourth of July weekend, drawing close to 200 visitors.

nett. Their manager said it was all even after Danville and we didn't say much else. If you look at total runs it wasn't even close. This could be one of those to be settled in Barcelona's things."

Palatine beat the Triplets 5-2 in Danville, but Granite City came back with a 10-2 win in the tournament semifinals. Burnett has been planning for a month to make sure Drake Marshall (4-1) is ready to pitch tonight's game. "They said they would have their best pitcher ready for us next time, and I guaranteed we would have our best," said Burnett.

Shortstop Les Nunes should be healthy and ready to go for the tournament, but left fielder Billy Herman's ankle might not be ready for a while. Burnett was also waiting to see if center fielder Jason Maxfield was available for the trip.

"If Jason can't make it we'll be fine with Ryan (Reeves) in center field," said Burnett. "We need to keep Bobby Wilson's bat in there too. Our pitching should be set up because we have a lot of off days before and after the tournament."

The Evansville Baseball Association is starting up the tournament again after three years without it.

"We always had trouble with rain, so we decided to quit for a while," said Bill Baumeyer of Eugene Fite, the tournament director. "We've had eight teams in the past. But with five teams we can play all the games on the big field. We've played all these teams before, and they are winning programs run by good people."

Owensboro is 12-7, but won a large tournament last week. Shelbyville also returns several players from last year's championship team. Eugene Fite of Evansville is 12-4 this year, with three losses by one run and another by two runs. Eight players played for Evansville Memorial High School. Don Mattingly's alma mater, which made it to the Indiana state semifinals.

"We're still recovering from that," said Baumeyer. "Memorial was ranked 20th in the nation by USA Today."

Leading the way for Evansville is left-hander Matt Alpers, who is a combined 32-1 in high school and Legion ball the last two years. His only loss came in the high school semifinals this year. He will pitch at the University of Evansville. Right fielder Ryan Barrett is an all-star also going to Evansville, while shortstop Robbie Kent is headed for Notre Dame. Behind Alpers in the pitching rotation is 6-7 left-hander Mike Feller, who will play basketball and baseball in college.

"The guys call him Bob," said Baumeyer.

Two other Evansville players have signed to play college baseball at Ball State.

with lots of experience in the Games. In fact, 14 of the 18 players have previous PSG experience. The Granite City group features graduating senior Ginger Henson, seniors to be Suzanne Stuart, Stephanie Kult and Julie Goclan, sophomore Kessel and freshman Holly Farnsworth.

Just out of eighth grade a year ago, Farnsworth led the team in scoring in the 1991 Games and scored seven goals as a freshman with the Lady Warriors this spring. Goclan and Kessel are the only newcomers to PSG competition from that group.

Collinsville, which made the state quarterfinals again last month, returns Lauren Nelson and Becky Thompson for their third year each. Sophomores Jennifer Herberts and Christi Miller are back for their second years, and senior Stephanie Judkins is in her first season.

Alton supplies senior twin scoring threats Camie and Carrie Bechtold for the fourth straight year. Alton's Marcey Jacobs and Lisa Hicks are playing for the third year. Rounding out the roster are Edwardsville

"Pioneer and North Shore are typically very strong," he said. "That's where most of the teams in the state tournament come from. Pioneer is our second game in pool play (July 11 at 10 a.m.), so that will be a big one in determining if we play for the gold or the bronze. West Central is our first game (July 10, 2 p.m.) and they will have the Springfield High players, so that should be very competitive."

"If we play up to our abilities, we'll be right there. The rivalry between Granite City and Collinsville is very competitive, but the girls get along-line in practice."

Kult and Miller, who engaged in a memorable penalty-kick duel in the sectional finals last month, will alternate in goal, and Burnett feels pretty confident about all the other positions as well.

"We had about 25 girls try out and we got most of the ones we wanted," said Briggs. Another player I would have liked to have had was Becky Opit from Belleville, but she has a sore back."

Consecutive hits by Bobby Wilson, Marshall and Ryan Reeves (two-run single) made it 5-2, then Cozair dropped a hit into right to make it 5-3.

"Chris Hill came on in relief in the fifth and we needed to win this team best fifth game (he's 5-1). He struck out six, walked no one and allowed only one hit in these innings."

"Chris always seems to give us a little spark when he comes in," said Burnett. "The big thing is he works fast and throws strikes. If you don't do that it's hard to get help from your fielders because they're back on their heels."

Les Nunes started the winning rally off starter Tyler Arnold with a one-out single in the fifth. The bases were loaded with two outs when Chris Hillreth grounded sharply up the middle. Shortstop Chris Brooks had a forecourt, but fumbled the ball as Nunes scored. Wilson kept running around third and scored the tying run as Brooks' throw home was wild.

The runners ended up at second and third, then Cozair lined a single off the glove of second baseman Brad Knight to score Reeves and Hillreth.

"When we decided to get it done there was no stopping us," said Burnett. "We had to keep our July streak alive."

The Triplets didn't lose a game in the month of July last year and are 4-0 this month. That streak will be severely tested in Evansville.

"We're putting so much emphasis on this weekend that we might have been looking past this game a little," said Burnett.

"But we can't afford to throw this one away. We have a chance to go 14-3 in the district."

The Triplets stayed a perfect 10-0 in North Division play and are close to clinching the regular-season division title for the fourth time in six years.

by strikeout and he only gave up one hit. But six walks, including four in the third inning, proved to be his undoing.

"If Jeff gets it over the plate, they're not going to hit it," said Winfield. "He looked like he got tired and his mechanics fell apart. Erik and Chad did a good job in relief."

At the beginning of this pivotal eight-game stretch, Winfield said if his team could win six of the eight it would be in good position for a bye in next week's district playoffs.

Murphy hoping 'Boomerang' brings his image back around

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

Eddie Murphy is an actor in a jam.

Although he is not without the money of a major Hollywood star, and certainly lives a life replete with the trappings of fame, the 32-year-old Hempstead, N.Y. native has lost the comically mean-spirited edge and dominant personality that made him a household name.

In 1985, Murphy was deemed "Mr. Box Office" in a cover story by Newsweek magazine. Major film hits like "Trading Places," "48 Hours" and "Beverly Hills Cop" placed him at the top of Hollywood's bankable name list.

Murphy single-handedly saved NBC's "Saturday Night Live" from extinction in the early 1980s with such characters as the complaint-prone Gumbor and the polyester-buckster Velvet Jones.

But as his career blossomed, so did Murphy's reputation as an undependable and difficult performer. Lackluster movies like "Best Defense," "The Golden Child" and Murphy's failed attempt as a director in "Harlem Nights" all further tarnished his professional credentials. Murphy was quickly developing a reputation as a performer who was no longer worth the high price of his services.

His latest motion picture, "Boomerang," is a concerted effort by Murphy to change all that. Murphy hopes the new project will not only be a box office success, but that it will also help him bridge the gap between his reputation as a supremely self-assured, almost offensively confident performer to that of a more mature, leading man.

In "Boomerang," Murphy plays a marketing executive in New York City who falls in love with his new boss, played by Robin Givens.

"I was interested in making a movie in which the comedy would derive from a role reversal," Murphy said. "I wanted it to be a relationship story about a man seeing what it's like to go through what some women experience."

I think every man is capable of being a rogue, to some extent. My character is put through the same thing he has been putting women through and gains a greater respect for relationships.

Respect for Murphy was tarnished somewhat after humorist Ari Buchwald won a suit against the actor, claiming Murphy stole the idea for the film "Coming To America" from him.

This trial over the suit was reported widely in newspapers across the country and helped shed some light on the favored, superstar treatment Murphy had been receiving from Paramount Pictures.

According to reports in the Wall Street Journal, Murphy's compensation package from Paramount for appearing in "Coming To America" included salaries for more than 50 employees of Murphy's television and movie company, plus a separate fund of over $600,000 to provide income and living expenses for six relatives and friends of the actor.

Murphy claims the entire incident was racially motivated and that he was a whipping boy for an industry that regularly lavishes all manner of extraordinary privileges on its headliners.

"It was far-fetched from the beginning. I knew it was coming," he said.

Marcus Graham (Eddie Murphy) falls in love with Jacqueline (Robin Givens), the one woman in his life who puts career before romance and treats him the way he usually treats women, in "Boomerang."

Murphy is currently engaged to 24-year-old model Nicole Mitchell, who is the mother of Murphy's 2-year-old daughter.

Bria. No wedding date has been announced. The couple are expecting a second child in November.

"Boomerang" is directed by East-St. Louis native Reginald Hudlin. Hudlin's brother Warington acted as co-producer.

'Boomerang' offers movie-goers no return

By Harry Hamm
Correspondent

Eddie Murphy's credentials as a film comedian continue to plunge with the release of "Boomerang," a film whose laughs are pondering and whose perspective is pathetic.

Murphy plays Marcus Graham, a marketing manager for a large, New York-based cosmetics manufacturer. When the company is the object of a takeover, Marcus is demoted and must answer to Robin Givens in the role of Jacqueline. Jacqueline is the new chief marketing executive for the firm.

Murphy has always fancied himself as a ladies man, loving and leaving them with the best. But Marcus gets swept away and then seduced by the take-charge Jacqueline. Soon it is she, not he, who's on top of the situation.

Murphy's two best buddies are played by David Alan Grier and Martin Lawrence. Halle Berry appears as an art director who not-so-secretly loves Marcus. Geoffrey Holder has a small role as a contact video specialist with some off-beat ideas of what a good television commercial looks like. Eartha Kitt has a demure role as the elderly but oversexed matriarch of the firm.

"Boomerang" depends on lots of negative, stereotypical behavior and non-stop bedroom references and scenes for its so-called humor.

The fact that "Boomerang" will probably sell a good number of tickets is perhaps the saddest statement this film has to make. Rated R (adult language references and explicit sex scenes). Running time: 118 minutes.

Hammer to appear at Illinois State Fair Aug. 20

Gov. Jim Edgar announced that internationally acclaimed rap star Hammer, one of the country's most versatile entertainers, will round out the star-studded line-up of grandstand entertainment at the 1992 Illinois State Fair.

Hammer is a super star in the entertainment business, and the addition of his dynamic and energetic talents to the grandstand shows truly will give Illinoisans the best schedule of entertainment at the state fair in the nation," Edgar said.

His great popularity with young people and his many achievements in the entertainment field make him one of the most sought-after entertainers in America. We are fortunate that we were able to book him for the Illinois State Fair so that thousands of fair visitors can enjoy his electrifying performance."

Hammer, whose 1988 debut album "Let's Get It Started" generated double-platinum sales, has since won three Grammy awards and was named "Entertainer of the Year" in the 1990 People's Choice Awards.

His hit singles "U Can't Touch This," "Pray," and "Have You Seen Her" have topped the charts. "Please Hammer Don't Hurt Em," his 10-time platinum second album, topped the Billboard 200 Top Albums chart in this country for 21 weeks and became the biggest-selling rap album ever.

His latest album "Too Legit To Quit" features a live band, full horn section, a dozen Hammer-penned tunes and two cover songs.

Hammer is a major coup for the Illinois State Fair," said Army Granat of JAM Prodctions, which is co-producing the Aug. 20 state fair concert.

Hammer will join other headliners Color Me Badd, Tesla, Alan Jackson, The Beach Boys, Chit Black, The B-52s, Travis Tritt and Tanya Tucker at the grandstand during the State Fair, which runs August 13-23 in Springfield.
